

Simplify and Streamline Onboarding of Your Trading Partners

The relationship between operators and their various suppliers is continually evolving. As operators adopt new technologies and streamline the cash flow process, they are increasingly mandating that suppliers be able to conform to standards passed down from an internal standards committee, a third-party e-commerce portal or an organization like PIDX international.

These standards are often enforced in business transactions between two entities.

Invoices, Purchase Orders, Field Tickets and many other documents must arrive in a format that each back office can easily process so as to not disrupt cash flow.

For Operators, receiving paper invoices is a nightmare due to the labor associated with checking and validating the contents and pricing. In addition, many operators have contracted out to third-party portals to host their commerce interactions with their suppliers. This just pushes the problem further out. Large operators risk delayed production and revenues while potentially putting suppliers out of business if they cannot transact efficiently with them. Operators see up to a 60% reduction in errors and rejects if their supply chain can trade with them electronically.
